Keep Feeling the Impact

Look for the new section of James Parkway to open for access to points south very soon. The final work on this section of roadway is wrapping up. The progress on the work during the scheduled shutdown of Irving Wick eastbound traffic affords the chance to remove access to the existing bridge. Stay tuned.

Some time around Labor Day, the new bridge is expected to open. It's a fitting day given the "Made by Licking County" elements of the new bridge and roadway.

Project Report: More Happening

The Port Authority sees the opening of the east side lot as a trigger to more long overdue east side improvements. Look for signage, fencing, and lighting improvements to unfold before year's end on the east side. Also, Boeing Facilities is installing a new chemical storage building and wrapping up the Navy workload improvements too.

Weather Station, Cams Running Again

The first public view of the Port Authority's weather station and cams was more than five years ago. The system started (and still is) showing its age in recent months. We're pleased to report that a new station has been installed drawing weather conditions from the northern edge of the East Parking Lot now. Also, three Weather Cams are uploading images every five minutes to the site from three different points on the campus. These have, since day one, been the most popular onthebase.com features. Enjoy!
