D.C. Fly-In Contingent Hits the Hill

After an 18-hour work day with a combined 70 hours of walking and 40 security check-points, the Port Authority's D.C. Fly-In contingent deserves a hearty, "Thanks!"

The 10-person contingent met with Congressman Pat Tiberi and Congressman Steve Stivers in addition to staff of eight other Capitol Hill offices among the Ohio Delegation. Joining the Port Authority customers, board, and staff were County Commissioner Rick Black, County Treasurer Olivia Parkinson, and Heath Mayor Mark Johns.

The agenda was to talk about the future of the Aerospace Center with the Ground-Based Strategic Deterrent and modernization of the Air Force Primary Standards Lab.

Entrance Upgrades Underway

The west and east side entrances to the Boeing Building will be getting a refresh. CS

Construction of Newark started on the west façade earlier this week. Also among the over $1 million worth of capital projects underway at the Aerospace Center are site redevelopment of the former Metrology Building and a major roof replacement. The truck loop road was recently opened with the visitor parking lot not far behind.

New Maps Are Here

With changes in parking lots and truck routes on the campus, new maps have been published to direct visitors. The Base Campus maps are online on the Port Authority website. As past visitors know, GPS doesn't always know how to find this place. Bring a map with you!
