Celebrating Life After BRAC

Major General Warren Berry, Air Force Material Command Vice Commander, keynoted an Aerospace Center event themed "20 Years of Success." The event found Berry praising the work of the community and the Port Authority saying, "You have set a benchmark and a model for post BRAC success. . . What you did was truly groundbreaking." The spotlight was on the workforce, over 200 of which can boast more than 20 years of service to the national defense here at Heath. See Facebook for a photo album and links to news coverage.

Twitter Audience is Both World, Local

Naturally, anything posted on Twitter is there for all the World to see. The fact the Port Authority has available clean room space can reach Israel. Messages about capital projects can be seen in Alaska. Welcomes to VIP visitors can be picked up by school kids in Germany. But there's more than meets the eye. The Port Authority pushes its Twitter feed to Message Centers at six different locations on the Aerospace Center campus, meaning the audience extends beyond just the Twitter Universe but zeroes in on a much more local audience.

Available Clean Room Incubator Space

Built on speculation in 2011, the Port Authority clean room space has returned to the market. The 50x20 Class 10,000 (ISO 7) clean room is part of the incubator at the Horton Building. The clean room became available upon the departure of a life sciences firm that signed a lease in 2014.

Such space is hard to find. In fact, the Port Authority has the only stand-alone clean room available in Central Ohio.
